Why Joseph was silent—HUMBLE MAN

The question is often asked: "Why is Joseph sometimes referred to as silent?"

Mainly, I guess, because the Gospels, although they tell us about St. Joseph, don't record anything which he said. Hence his "silence." More generally, though, calling Joseph silent is a way of saying that he was a humble, unassuming man, who faithfully carried out a unique and exalted role in God's providential plan while modestly living what was by superficial standards, a very ordinary kind of life.

St. Pope John Paul II discusses all this in his apostolic exhortation on the "person & mission" of St. Joseph "in the life of Christ & of the Church." The Pope speaks of the "aura of silence" surrounding St. Joseph in the Gospels as a sign not only of his "humble, mature" character but of his contemplative spirit. It is this "silence" of one who listens to the word of God, he writes, that makes St. Joseph "the man known for having faithfully carried out God's commands."
